A Colored Man Nearly Murdered Because He Refused to Enlist as a Subuniture.

Our whole army is now strongly posted on the heights in the rear of this place. The enemy are close upon us, but seeing us so thoroughly prepared they may not risk an engagement. Should they do so, [From The Detroit Tribune] There appear to be some very unprincipled men seting in the capacity of substi-tute brokers in this city, men to whom the severest punishment would be exceedingly mild in comparison with the outra-ges they commit. For several days past the daily press has contained accounts of the swindling of these men, yet they carry on their work with as much vigor as ever. On Friday evening last, about nine o'clock, an inoffensive colored man named John Williams, who resides in Canada, but who by officers just arrived from the front, that in the attack made Sanday upon our left by the rebels in which they were so handsomely repulsed, the rebel General A. P.
